How Great Pitchers Fool the Batters

The day of successful high ball | be able to put it where the batter is pitching is a thing of the past. There was a time when it was the accepted theory that one of the requisites of the successful twirler was to keep the ball high and around the batter's neck. For a long time it proved successful, but when the batters became ac customed to this style of pitching and learned to keep away from the pitcher found himself up against it every time he resorted to the high fast one. With the advent of the "spit ball" it became apparent that the low ball was harder to hit, and naturally the present-day twirlers adapted themselves to this delivery. The one great reason for the inability to hit the low ball successfully as given by players of experience, is the fact that It is harder to gauge proper-

This is true when the man at bat is trying to pull off the hit-and-run play. Formerly, when the twirlers kept their fast balls high, it was pie for the batter to either step back or in, as the occasion required and push or pull the ball in the direction he wished it to go.

With the low ball it is different as the batter cannot gauge the ball any too well, and finds it a difficult mat-

It is particularly hard for the batter to follow a low ball on a dark day as was shown in the second game of

"Chief" Bender, who was on the mound for Connie Mack's men, is a pitcher who, when he is right, has a emendous amount of speed. Philadelphia managed to score a few runs for Bender early in the game, and with this lead there was no chance for the Glants to catch up.

Bender had the advantage of the gathering gloom, and this, coupled with his ability to keep his fast ball low, proved a stumbling block for the aggressive Giants.

Members of both teams say the big fellow was unhittable on account of this, which goes to show how much harder it is to hit the low ball than the high ones.

Fans generally seem to have a mistaken idea of what pitchers' control really means. The usual impression is that the fewer bases on balls a twirler hands out during a season the better is his control.

While in a certain measure this is the truth, still there is something else than merely the ability of getting the ball over the plate between the shoulders and the knees of the batter.

The successful twirler of the present day, in order to be a consistent winner, must be able not only to get the ball over the plate, but must also east liable to hit it safely.

Some hitters are weak on a high ball, close to the handle, while others cannot hit a low, fast one pitched inside. The same is true of balls pitched on the outside, high or low, as may suit the occasion.

In order to get the ball in the places where the batter is weak the pitcher must possess great accuracy. which is the true test of control.

Again there are many occasions when the catcher has called for a waste ball, in order to stop a base runner from stealing a base. If the pitcher has not enough command of the ball to be able to handle it out where the batter cannot hit it and where the backstop can readily handle the sphere, it's going to be pretty tough for the pad artist to make his end of the play right.

Many a pitcher who gives quite a few bases on balls during a season really has better control than the averages show.

That is, he will sometimes pitch up three bad balls in an endeavor to land his man before he sees that he will not swing at bad ones, and then rather than give him a chance to hit a "cripple," meaning one which the batter is reasonably sure will be right over, he will walk the batter to take a chance with the next one.

Of course, a walk at the beginning of an inning or when there is no one the first world's series between New on the bases is just as good as a base York and the Athletics on the Polo hit, still the pitcher who is always trying to make a man hit at a bad ball gets away with many a game for just this reason, and they are the ones who are usually there with the control.

Atlanta, Ga., March 29.-Seven two men blcycle teams, composed of some of the best riders in the world, started at 2:30 this afternoon at the Velodrome track here on a six day race of 48 hours, eight hours each evening. Let us suppose that upon the approach of this Nebulous Wanderer, the Mariner's Compass should refuse to guide him on his way by swinging continuously in dire confusion, for without this guiding instrument, no ships could sail the seas.

Suppose this comet would affect all the electric current now being used, the result would be a panic in our Commercial System. Without the aid of electricity, telegrams could not be sent over the wires, all the telephones would be without a sound, no railway trains be operated, all our street car system and automobiles at a standstill. People would be climbing stairs in all the buildings of our cities instead of riding up and down, as is usual in elevators, no wireless could be sent or received. The papers would, in the meantime, make humorous allusion to the kerosene lamps and candles of our Forefathers, which would be quite the fashion until our starry visitor should take his departure.

In the crowded cities, riots would occur, there being no way in which to call out the police. Fires could start and gain great headway without the aid of the electric fire alarm. All the powerful steam and water-power electrical plants would be turning their wheels, but no current generated until this mysterious visitor blds our little world adieu and again commences its seventy-five years of wandering out into the Joy would take the place of consternation, and business be resumed, proving how much our lives depend upon the daily and modern uses of electricity, and especially the Electric Flat Iron, which is rapidly displac ing the old stove-heated one.

The plea of guilty was entered today by J. F. Valle, general counsel for the fuel company. The court assessed a fine of $8,000 and judgment for $192,000 in favor of the govern ment for coal taken from the ground The land reverts to the public domain and the company loses the $14,400 fee originally paid, as well as the further sums paid to the dummy entrymen through whom it was taken.

The indictments against the indi vidual defendants were dismissed, as were five suits in equity involving many thousands of acres taken up by dummies as agricultural land and atterward turned over to the fuel company. Special Attorney Fred A. May who has prosecuted the coal cases for the government, explains the dismissal of the equity cases by say ing that the land involved had been bonded and the bonds sold through the Morton Trust company of New York to innocent purchasers. Rather than reimburse these purchasers to the amount of $2,000,000, it was deem ed advisable to accept the plea of guilty in the criminal case, and let the title to the bonded property re main undisturbed.

Tom Nikolatos, the Greek, who was badly beaten up by his fellow country men in Ogden canyon Sunday morn since which time he has been confined to the Ogden hospital, was reported last evening to be in an improved condition and it is now thought by the attending physicians that he will recover from his wounds. Jim Pantos, who is accused of assaulting Nikolatos with a revolver and other-wise beating him, is being held in the county jail and will likely be charged with assault and battery with a dead ly weapon. It is quite certain that the injured man will survive his injuries, hence Pantos will be spared a trial on the charge of murder. Further demonstrations among the Greek population of the canyon have not been made since the row of Sunday, the entire Greek fraternity going to work yesterday as though nothing had happened. There were three other men implicated in the fight of Sunday, but so clannish are the foreigners that they will not divulge the names of the guilty parties, so that it s very probable that Pantos will be the only man prosecuted for the alleged offense. A complaint will be filed against the alleged aggressor today or tomerrow.

CHARLES B. HANFORD AT THE GRAND TONIGHT.

Mr. Charles B. Hanford's present tour has been made the occasion of the most brilliant series of productions with which he has ever been associated. This is saying much, for Mr. Hanford is recognized today as a leader in his profession; one who preserves its most worthy traditions and yet who believes in providing every accessory Only the best plays that have graced the English language engage Mr. Han-ford's interest. This season he will present a series of resplendent productions of "The Merchant of Venice," "Othello," "The Taming of the Shrew," "Much Ado About Nothing," and "The Winter's Tale." Not only does this tour present in Mr. Hanford a star whose poplarity might unaided be re-lied upon to win public approbation, but the supporting company presents a most distinguished list of players, including that now celebrated portray-er of classic feminine roles, Miss Marie Drofnah. The stage settings and costumes have been designed and are exe-cuted on a scale commensurate with the determination to make this season a pre-eminent one in Mr. Hanford's career. Neither scholarship, artistry nor expense has been spared in securing historic accuracy, beauty and richness. The date of Mr. Han-ford's engagement at the Grand Opera House is tonight, on which occasion he will present "The Winter's Tale."

SUPREME COURT

ON CLYDE CASE

Opinion Holds Secretary of Interior Had Right to Lease Withdrawn Lands.

In an opinion handed down Monday by the supreme court, it is held that the secretary of the interior has a right to lease land for grazing pur-poses which has been withdrawn from entry while improvements are being made. This decision affirms the lower court in the case of James W. Clyde, et al., respondents, against John J. Cummings, et al., which gave a verdict of $711.60 in favor of the plaintiffs. The action was brought to recover $1,164.75 for grazing privileges which they claimed were enjoyed by the defendants upon land leased by the plaintiffs from the United States. The land involved constituted the Strawberry valley and its drainage area. The secretary of the interior withdrew the land from entry on March 13, 1907, under the reclamation act in order to
